DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-4 and 11-15 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ferree (U.S. Patent Publication Number 2003/0195630) in view of Fearnot et al. (US Patent 6,358,284).

Ferree discloses a minimally invasive method of augmenting or replacing the nucleus pulposus of a spinal disc comprising the steps of preparing a disc treatment site, piercing and inserting into and through the sidewall of the disc's annular ring a cannulated insertion tool and inserting an elongated nucleus pulposus augmentation or replacement material through the cannulated insertion tool and into the nucleus pulposus, wherein the elongated nucleus pulposus augmentation or replacement material is selected from strips, cords, braids, tubes, rolls and pellets, and further comprising the presence of a bioactive factor in the elongated nucleus pulposus augmentation or replacement material (see figures 1-7C and paragraphs 0006, 0019 and 0021).

Ferree discloses a minimally invasive method of augmenting or replacing the nucleus pulposus and discloses that biological replacement material can include strips, cords, braids, tubes, rolls and pellets, and further comprising the presence of a bioactive factor. A biological replacement material known in the art is submucosa. Fearnot et al. '284 discloses submucosa that is useful in many medical applications requiring a compliant, tissue-compatible material (Col. 4, lines 25-30). And among the various types of submucosa, that of a pig may be used (Col. 3, lines 1-15). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to perform the method of Ferree having at least the step of inserting a bioactive material that is SIS as taught by Fearnot et al. to better support the replacing of the nucleus pulposus of a spinal disc.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-4 and 11-15 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Finality

The finality of the previous action has been withdrawn in view of:

- (1) the petition to revive approved on 4/29/2008 and
- (2) the affidavit submitted on 11/1/2007

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
